Ford’s Theatre explores the legacy of President Abraham Lincoln and celebrates the American experience through theatre and education. A working theatre, historical monument, world-class museum and learning center, Ford’s Theatre is the premier destination in Washington, D.C. to explore and celebrate Lincoln’s ideals and leadership principles.

Ford’s Theatre History
In 1861, theatre manager John T. Ford leased out the abandoned First Baptist Church on Tenth Street to create Ford’s Theatre. Over the next few years, the venue became a popular stage for theatrical and musical productions. On April 14, 1865, Abraham Lincoln visited Ford’s for a performance of Our American Cousin. At this performance, Lincoln was shot by John Wilkes Booth, a Confederate sympathizer and white supremacist. Lincoln died the next morning in the Petersen House, a boarding house located across the street. Ford’s Theatre remained dark for more than 100 years, officially reopening in 1968 as a national historic site and working theatre. It is operated through a public-private partnership between the National Park Service and Ford’s Theatre Society.

Ford’s Theatre Today
Through its inspiring theatrical productions, live historic interpretation and engaging education programs, Ford’s Theatre offers visitors the opportunity to immerse themselves in America’s past while revealing meaningful connections to today.

As a working theatre, Ford’s produces renowned plays, vibrant musicals and newly commissioned works that captivate and entertain while examining political and social issues related to Lincoln’s legacy. With works from the Tony-nominated Come From Away and the nationally acclaimed Big River to the world premieres of Grace, Meet John Doe, The Heavens Are Hung In Black, Liberty Smith, Necessary Sacrifices, The Widow Lincoln and The Guard, Ford’s Theatre is making its mark on the American theatre landscape. With the opening of the Aftermath Exhibits at the Center for Education and Leadership, Ford’s Theatre has become a major center for learning, where people of all ages can examine Lincoln’s multi-faceted legacy through exhibits, workshops and educational programs.

Welcome to Ford’s Theatre and our production of Little Shop of Horrors! In my 20 years as Director, very few shows, outside of our annual A Christmas Carol, have been produced on our historic stage more than once. Little Shop of Horrors is one of those exceptions.

This confection of a musical is an exciting blend of sci-fi, horror, comedy and love story, set to rock, doo-wop and Motown-infused tunes. The first hit musical of the genius writing team of Howard Ashman and Alan Menken, this roof-raising show has become a cult favorite in the American musical theatre canon. Full of heart and humor, Little Shop champions the underdog, while simultaneously offering a cautionary reminder to be careful what you wish for. We hope you enjoy our take on this delightful horror comedy.

As a working theatre, museum, historic site and learning center, there is always more to explore at Ford’s Theatre. Spring is a busy time at Ford’s, as we welcome students and visitors from around the world. On April 14, we’ll mark the anniversary of President Abraham Lincoln’s assassination. I encourage you to visit the museum before the show and during intermission or consider returning to see One Destiny or participating in our History on Foot tour Investigation: Detective McDevitt—two programs that explore Lincoln’s assassination.

Thank you for joining us as we honor President Abraham Lincoln’s love of the performing arts! I hope to see you again soon!

Sincerely,

Paul R. Tetreault

“The set is inspired by the artwork of Gerd Winner and the 1990 Dick Tracy film (particularly the matte paintings by Michael Lloyd) and their graphic, colorful grittiness. We use a very bold yellow, green and red pulp-y color scheme that makes the world feel slightly surreal and heightened.”

In his lifetime, English writer H.G. Wells’ prolific output is unmatched. In the nonfiction arena, he wrote essays on politics, history and science. He was also known for writing biographies, commentaries, over 50 novels and many more short stories. His science fiction novels, including The War of the Worlds (written and serialized in magazines from 1895 to 1897), became so popular and esteemed that Wells is often referred to as the father of science fiction. The War of the Worlds is one of the earliest examples of fiction exploring conflicts between the inhabitants of planet Earth and extraterrestrial beings. But back in 1894, Wells wrote a curious short story titled The Flowering of the Strange Orchid.

On The Flowering of the Strange Orchid, from Port of Planets Publishing:

“When an unassuming and amateur botanist stumbles upon a strange and exotic orchid at an auction, his curiosity is piqued. He sees the orchid as a unique treasure to be nurtured and admired. But as the orchid grows and flourishes, its peculiar characteristics become increasingly apparent. Soon, it becomes clear that the orchid is unlike anything the botanist has ever encountered. Its otherworldly beauty masks a hidden danger, and the plant’s true nature gradually reveals itself.”

In 1956, Wells’ story inspired science fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke to write an updated take on the carnivorous plant’s story. This time, the story was titled The Reluctant Orchid. While Wells’ story left a great deal to the imagination, Clarke’s story made the intentions of the plant unabashedly clear.

Original Little Shop of Horrors screenwriter Charles B. Griffith wrote a script that was influenced by Clarke’s story. But the film’s overall concept and tone was inspired by a 1932 story by John Collier, titled Green Thoughts—a variation on the man-eating plant motif, which Griffith imbued with a dose of dark comedy. The resulting script created an original farcical style of humor, not unlike early plays from the Theatre of the Ridiculous.

Enter American actor, filmmaker, producer and film distributor, Roger Corman. In the late 1950s, Corman began producing low-budget horror and sci-fi films, often called B-movies because they were paired with main attraction feature films in drive-ins across the country. Corman produced, directed and shot the film, originally titled The Passionate People Eater, in two days and one night, on the set of another B-movie titled Bucket of Blood, on a budget of $28,000. It featured an early performance from actor Jack Nicholson. Because Corman didn’t think The Passionate People Eater would make any money, he did not bother to copyright it. Consequently, the film entered the public domain shortly after being released under the title The Little Shop of Horrors.

In its initial double feature release, Little Shop of Horrors was paired with Black Sunday, an Italian gothic horror film, directed by Mario Bava. Although Black Sunday became an international hit, the popularity of Little Shop of Horrors didn’t kick into full gear until television broadcasts of the film through the 1960s and ‘70s. Today, it is considered a gem of the Corman oeuvre, gaining cult classic status.

The film’s stature and notoriety grew even more when it was adapted as a musical for the stage in 1982, with book and lyrics by Howard Ashman and music by Alan Menken. Menken framed the story of Seymour, the nerdy florist shop worker, with rock-and-roll, doo-wop and the performing style of early Motown groups.

The resulting cast album had hits in the Top 100 with “Skid Row (Downtown),” “Somewhere That’s Green” and “Suddenly Seymour.” The musical, directed by Ashman, premiered Off-Off-Broadway at the WPA Theatre before moving to the Orpheum Theatre Off-Broadway, where it ran for five years and 2,209 performances – making it one of the highest-grossing productions in Off-Broadway history.

In writing about the musical, Ashman said that “The show satirizes many things: science fiction, B-movies, musical comedy itself and even the Faust legend.” Theatre historians believe that in addition to the catchy tunes, the popularity and longevity of the original production rested on Ellen Greene’s turn as Audrey in what became a career-defining performance for the actress. The stage musical was adapted for the screen in 1986. The film of the same title was directed by American puppeteer Frank Oz (The Muppets, Sesame Street, Star Wars) and cast Rick Moranis and Ellen Greene in the leads.

The popularity of Little Shop of Horrors has not abated. In 2015, Ellen Greene and Jake Gyllenhaal received rave reviews in a New York City Center concert staging of the musical. The current Off-Broadway revival in New York has been running for five years. The musical is now a must-revive production in regional theaters across the country and continues to be an all-time favorite for theatre lovers everywhere.

José Carrasquillo is the Director of Artistic Programming at Ford’s Theatre.

We honor the life of Douglas Wilson, Director of Finance and Administration, who passed away on January 24, 2024. Joining Ford's Theatre in 2010, Doug’s tenure at Ford’s positively impacted every corner of the organization as both a trusted advisor and colleague. Over the years, Doug developed a business acumen that left him a quiet but giant figure in the arts nonprofit field in the D.C. region. Doug’s record of financial stewardship and executive administration demonstrated his leadership through some of the organization’s most challenging times, most notably when the theatre and museum had to be closed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. He was also a tremendous champion of the employees at Ford’s and worked tirelessly to create an inclusive workplace. In recent years, he played an instrumental role in securing the new building currently under construction as part of the Ford’s Theatre campus expansion.

Those who knew Doug appreciated his candor, empathy and directness that found its way into moments that were both memorable and accompanied by his sense of humor. His love for travel and entertainment created lifelong memories with friends. We will miss Doug and will ensure his memory lives on as we continue building on the many great contributions he made to Ford’s Theatre.

Best known as a pivotal creative mind behind the renaissance of Disney animation, including The Little Mermaid, Aladdin and Beauty and the Beast (dedicated to “Our friend, Howard Ashman, who gave a Mermaid her voice and a Beast his soul...”), Ashman's first love was theater. Ashman was a founder of Off-Off-Broadway's renowned WPA Theatre, where he conceived, wrote and directed God Bless You, Mr. Rosewater, as well as the classic musical, Little Shop of Horrors (both music by Alan Menken). In 1986, he wrote and directed the Broadway musical Smile (music by Marvin Hamlisch). Lamented as a lost treasure of the 1980s theater scene, Smile remains popular on high school and college campuses throughout the country. Little Shop of Horrors Student Guide

From the Screen to the Stage

With only two filming days and a micro-budget by today’s movie standards, Little Shop of Horrors debuted as a comedy horror film in 1960. The film was adapted into a musical that debuted Off-Off-Broadway in 1982, with book and lyrics by Howard Ashman and music by Alan Menken. Fast forward to our 2024 production. We will explore the themes of this cult classic turned Off-Broadway mainstay making its way to the Ford’s stage.

Who’s Who on Skid Row

Welcome to Skid Row, the location of a romantic dark comedy and Mushnik’s Flower Shop. Mr. Mushnik is the shop owner and a father figure to Seymour, a mild-mannered florist clerk with a green thumb and eyes for Audrey. Audrey, a fellow employee at the flower shop, is in an abusive relationship with Orin, a dentist who delights in making his patients feel pain. The cast is rounded out by Crystal, Ronnette and Chiffon, who are named after 1960s doo-wop girl groups and function as a Greek chorus. They comment and describe what is going on in the play, often singing directly to the audience. Love, ambition and knowing when to do the right thing are strong themes in the play.

As you watch the play, think about the following questions:

🔍 What do the characters lose in order to gain what they want?
🔍 Is what they want worth the sacrifice and is there another way in which they could have achieved their goals?
🔍 When do you know if enough is enough? What is the cost of ambition?

Audrey II (or Twoey)

But who or what is Audrey II, and how does it come to life on stage?

The character description in the script describes Audrey II as “An anthropomorphic cross between a Venus Flytrap and an avocado. It has a huge nasty looking pod, which gains a shark-like aspect when open and snapping at food.” The plant has mysterious origins, which explains its out-of-this-world abilities and extraordinary cravings.

Four different puppets of varying sizes represent Audrey II at various stages of development. The puppets were created by a company called Monkey Boys Productions.
Little Shop of Horrors has been a part of the Monkey Boys Productions story since day one. The puppets are built using the same basic format as the original Off-Broadway production, designed by Martin P. Robinson. The puppets you are seeing in this production are loosely based on the shapes of the puppets in the current Off-Broadway production of Little Shop. However, the Monkey Boys team has taken the design in a new direction with the addition of shark-style teeth and an all-new paint scheme. Puppetry is a multimedia artform, and this means that we use everything from steel and wood to carbon fiber and foam to fabric and paint in order to bring these incredible puppets to life. Puppeteering these two massive plants is a full-body workout. For Pod 3, the puppeteer is seat belted into a chair inside the pot and uses their arms to manipulate the jaws of the plant. This allows them to imbue Audrey II with lots of life and movement.

–Betsy Falk, Monkey Boys Productions

Audrey II is most closely associated with the Venus Flytrap (Dionaea muscipula), a carnivorous plant. Test your Venus Flytrap knowledge by taking our short quiz.

Education Resources at On Demand and at Your Fingertips

Ford’s Theatre education offers a myriad of ways in which to engage with the history of our site and learn about the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. Each pathway offers a unique exploration and varies in its form and content. Choose a format or mix and match, from One Destiny: On Demand, to a live Virtual Investigation: Detective McDevitt, to navigating our Lincoln Assassination pages at your own pace.

One Destiny: On Demand

Ford’s Theatre presents One Destiny: On Demand, available to stream from your home or your classroom. The 40-minute play explores the fateful night of Abraham Lincoln’s assassination told from the perspectives of Ford’s Theatre owner Harry Ford and actor Harry Hawk. As they reconstruct the sequence of events, they grapple with the question: Could John Wilkes Booth have been stopped?
The recorded performance features performers Michael Bunce and Stephen F. Schmidt and is a wonderful complement to a historic site visit or classroom curriculum. A lesson plan and educational resources are available for download on our website.

Information about One Destiny: On Demand can be found on the Visit Us page of Ford’s website: www.fords.org.

Virtual Investigation: Detective McDevitt

Register your class for a live Virtual Field Trip and interact with Detective McDevitt as he investigates the assassination of President Lincoln. Revisit sites and reexamine clues from April 14, 1865. In this 60-minute interactive, theatrical program, participants will interact with historical characters portrayed by an actor, examine primary source images and hear witness statements. Visit the Teaching and Learning pages on our website for more information on pricing and how to schedule a session for your classroom.

Lincoln Assassination on Ford’s Website

Dive deeper into the story of Lincoln’s murder at the hands of John Wilkes Booth. Take a closer look at artifacts from the tell-tale night in this richly curated online exhibit filled with high resolution photographs and insightful information to prompt classroom discussions. Each page on the site offers new information, including a timeline of the day’s events, first-person eyewitness accounts from the theatre and evidence used in the trial of the conspirators. Ask and answer questions about the impact of Lincoln’s death on America and the legacy that continues to live on today.
